Crytek Partner with Level Up! Games to Launch Warface in Brazil / Co-publisher will deliver Warface's explosive action to a new audience

Frankfurt am Main (Germany) (ots) -

Crytek GmbH today announced a new partnership with game publisher Level Up! that will bring their free-to-play FPS, Warface, to players in Brazil.

Brazil's leading distributor of online games, Level Up! have been delivering exciting online experiences to players for over a decade, with millions of gamers enjoying the range of titles they operate across Brazil, India and the Philippines. Acting as co-publisher for Warface, Level Up! will now give players in South America's biggest country the chance to join with friends and tackle the intense cooperative and competitive missions on offer in the military shooter.

"Level Up! boast unparalleled experience in delivering great online games to players in Brazil," said Dirk Metzger, General Manager of Publishing at Crytek. "By partnering with them, we can be confident that players across the country will be able to experience Warface as intended and discover for themselves why the game is steadily amassing an army of fans around the world."

The imminent arrival of Warface in Brazil means the game will soon be available to players across five continents.

About Level Up! Games Level Up! is a company founded in Asia in 2002 with the mission of introducing an innovative and interactive digital entertainment experience to the markets in which it operates. Founded in the Philippines, the company then branched out to Brazil, where it has been operating since 2004.
